

Prehistoric Playtime

Was “Big Foot” real? What did T-Rex eat for breakfast? We may not be able to answer these questions but we’re going to have fun exploring a time when dinosaurs roamed the earth and birds almost as big as planes flew across the sky!

Big Foot Stompers

Have you ever seen bigfoot? Or even his trademark footprint? Well, lots of people believe they have. Have fun making Big Foot’s footprints with just cardboard, scissors and rope with this arts & crafts activity shown in this example sheet by Camp Happy Counselor Sami Bowling.

Life as a T-Rex

Have you ever tried to make your arms look like a T-Rex’s arms just for fun? Try doing it as a challenge! See how much you can do throughout your day having short T-Rex arms by putting your arms in your sleeves and leaving out only your forearms and hands! Now, see if you can brush your teeth or hair, or feed yourself a snack, or a note!

Edible Dino Claws Snack

Who would have thought eating dinosaur claws would be yummy? Check out this 3-step snack guide to making an adorable and delicious snack. (Caution to our friends with nut allergies; you’re going to need to find substitutes!)

Prehistoric Playtime Playbook

Enjoy learning about dinosaurs with this activity book made just for you by We Canceve.

Journal Entry

Did you have fun today? Be sure to journal all about your prehistoric playtime!

